Where the candidates stand

If you're like most working Americans, you're worried about your children's education and your family's future. Here's a look at where the candidates for Congress stand on issues like student loans, quality schools, and education and training for the jobs of the future.

EDUCATION

REPUBLICAN

JAMES WALSH

☑ Supports cuts in student loans. Voted to cut $10 billion from federal student loan programs (H.R. 2491), adding $600 in costs for students in the Stafford loan program and up to $5,000 in costs for parents with PLUS loans, and eliminating direct loans for 2.5 million students, forcing them to rely on less flexible bank-sponsored loans.

☑ Votes to cut education. Voted to cut $3.6 billion from education programs, including Head Start and Safe and Drug-Free Schools (H.R. 2491). Supported eliminating the Department of Education.

☑ Supports cuts in job training programs. Voted to slash federal employment and job training programs by $700 million (H.R. 2127).

DEMOCRAT

MARTY MACK

☑ Protects funding for college loans. Opposes measures to cut federal student loan programs. Will fight to increase working families' access to student loans and scholarships for college education.

☑ Supports our schools. Believes in investing in children and their nutrition, safety and education. Will strengthen public schools and support Head Start, school lunch, and Safe and Drug-Free School programs.

☑ Supports job training and opportunities. Supports policies to provide more training and opportunities for the jobs of the future. Supports incentives to encourage corporations to invest in skills training for their employees.
