Dear Carl,

Although I'd conveyed my thanks to you verbally for loaning the two videos on occupational health for my Sociology of Medicine class, I want to repeat my appreciation in writing.

From the list you sent me, I chose one from CNYCOSH ("Hard Metals Disease"--excellent and, because it includes Syracuse, highly salient to our students), one from AFL-CIO ("Those Who Know Don't Tell"--very good capsule history of labor's fight for occupational health and safety. I showed it first and it proved a good lead-in to the other two.) and "A Price for Every Progress: The Health Hazards of VDTs" (it's "zippy" style caught students' attention, but more importantly, convinced them that such questions are not merely the concern of miners or machinists).

With your help, this segment of my course went very well--so much so that I intend to expand it in the future.

Yours truly,
